

An R Package is a form of data product. In creating an R package, you've created polished, documented software for your users. This is a big step over just distributing functions or code that do a task. In this brief set of lectures, we cover the basics of creating R packages.